

Maureen Hayden

Statehouse bureau chief, CNHI Indiana Newspapers

Hayden covers Indiana statehouse news for 13 community newspapers in Indiana, located across the state. She specializes in reporting on how politics and policymaking in the Indiana State Capitol impact local communities. She's a veteran reporter, now working for CNHI, a media company that owns more than 150 community newspapers in 20 states. Hayden was the first reporter to break the story of the 2015 HIV epidemic in Scott County, Ind., among abusers of intravenous drugs.
