Jill Houghton
Executive director, U.S. Business Leadership Network

While pursuing her bachelor’s degree from the University of Kansas, Jill Houghton interned for U.S. Sen. Robert J. Dole and the experience, as well as her challenges associated with having a learning disability, ignited the direction of her professional aspirations. She serves as executive director of the U.S. Business Leadership Network, or USBLN, a national, non-profit, non-partisan business-to-business network that helps business drive performance by leveraging disability inclusion in the workplace, supply chain and marketplace. Houghton has over 25 years of diverse leadership experience at the federal, state and local levels working with business to advance the inclusion of persons with disabilities.
